About Brett Rowe

Brett Rowe is the driver of Herd Racing's #75 Marshall University Dodge Charger in NASCAR's 2008 Nationwide Series.

No stranger to success on the track, Brett was the 2005 ARCA Lincoln Welder Truck Series national champion and tied for the driver points championship and won Rookie of the Year honors during the 2004 Truck Series season.

During his 22 ARCA Truck Series races in 2004 and 2005, Brett scored a whopping 17 Top 5 finishes, 18 Top 10 finishes and won eleven races. Not many drivers can boast that they were able to visit Victory Lane in half of the races they entered!

During the 2006 season, Rowe finished ninth in series points in his first season in the ARCA RE/MAX racing series and competed in nine races in NASCAR's Busch Series during the 2007 race season before signing on with Herd Racing in preparation for the 2008 racing campaign.

A husband (Shelley) and father of three (Blaine, Madison and Braiden), Rowe is a Barboursville, West Virginia, native who attended local schools, as well as Marshall University before establishing a career in his family's Huntington-based bedding company.

Born on May 6, 1967, Brett grew up racing and has logged victories in just about every racing series he has entered. In addition to NASCAR's Busch Series, and ARCA's RE/MAX and Lincoln Welder racing series, Brett has also raced in the ASA Series and local legend car, go-karts, ATV and motocross circuits around the country.
